

Seton Hall University invites nominations for, and expressions of interest in, the position of Dean of the College of Education and Human Services. The University seeks an academic leader who has a demonstrated commitment to educational and scholarly excellence, a record of effective leadership, and a commitment to collegiality, shared governance, faculty research, and student success. In addition, candidates should have a record of teaching and scholarship that would qualify them for tenure and senior rank in one of the disciplines in the College: Educational Studies; Education Leadership, Management and Policy; and Professional Psychology and Family Therapy. They must also be able to embrace and share the University's Catholic mission.

The College of Education and Human Services prepares teachers, educational leaders, school and counseling psychology professionals; it offers a broad range of nationally recognized and accredited programs (APA, COAMFTE, NCATE/CAEP) at the undergraduate, post baccalaureate, and graduate levels. College of Education and Human Services faculty are globally, nationally, and regionally recognized for their research and involvement in their professional fields, as well as committed teachers and advisors. As the landscape for mental health practitioner and teacher/leader preparation evolves, the College of Education and Human Services is dedicated to active engagement in the process through research, continuous improvement of programs through assessment, and collaborative partnerships. Seton Hall seeks a leader who will build on the tradition of the College of Education and Human Services to enhance existing undergraduate, graduate, and certificate-level programs, while also promoting new initiatives. The new dean must be well versed in accreditation for the professions served by the College, and will be called upon to lead the development of marketing strategies and fundraising efforts to support the work of the College.
